About the Seminar

Language can be used for developing both an individual and a societal sense. It is commonly used among psychologists and educators with reference to individuals referring to the phenomenon of child language acquisition. Language competence involves several systems. Students need to master a system for understanding the meaning of various things in their own perspective. They must also acquire a facility with the forms of language, ranging from the sound structure of words to the grammatical structure of sentences. Additionally, this knowledge must go hand in hand in developing their social competence. Mastery of these skills, which occurs during the preschool years, will allow the child to function as a successful listener and speaker in many communication contexts. Much of this learning is accomplished without formal instruction, and what is known is largely tacit in nature. Student's achievement is measured in the academic context and it has become a hot topic today, especially with increased accountability for classroom teachers. The ultimate goal for any teacher is to improve the ability level and prepare students to face any situations. In this regard the seminar will provide a platform for the academics and scholars to present their views in connection to the theme.

Sub-themes / Thrust Areas:

- Early Childhood: Language Learning and Development
- Language expressions in children
- Language development and cognitive skill
- Language testing and assessment
